Moro Uprising in Philippines May Come Now

United Press Telegram.

MANILA, July 18.—A Moro uprising on the island of Palawan is expected to follow the death of three natives who were shot down when they attacked Dean C. Worcester, Secretary of the Interior of the Philippines. Worcester was inspecting the island.

The revolt against him was carefully planned and only his bodyguard saved him. He was formerly a professor at the University of Michigan and was named by President McKinley along with J. C. Schurman, Admiral George Dewey and General Elwell S. Otis to the island to form a government in the Philippines.

He advocated a large standing army on the islands to maintain peace. This made him very unpopular with the natives and the native press.

FREED BRIDGE SITUATION MIXED.

Bellevorn Company Continue to Ignore the Commissioners.

IS EXPECTED TO APPEAL

Commissioners Say It Will Cost $20,000 to Put Bridge in Proper Repair, So $50,000 Is Fair Price to Pay for the Structure.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, July 18.—The Bellevorn bridge matter is still in suspense. Not one word has been heard from the corporation which built the structure. Very few are of the opinion that it will accept the $50,000 awarded by the viewers. Some say it will appeal whether satisfied or not, in the hopes of obtaining a higher price. In that case, the company runs the risk of having the valuation reduced by the higher courts.

Notice was served on the company last Wednesday, that the commissioners of Fayette and Washington counties had accepted the property and the collection of tolls ceased at noon that day.

Following the serving of the notice, the counties became responsible for the condition of the bridge. An accident now, through negligence of those who claim the ownership of the structure would refer back to the counties of Fayette and Washington in case of a damage suit.

To avoid trouble of any nature the commissioners have placed a man in charge, who will make what repairs are deemed necessary for safety. The Commissioners state that it would take from $20,000 to $25,000 to put the bridge in first class condition. It is over 900 feet in length, about 20 feet wide and is a three-span affair. Before another year rolls around, new approaches will be required at both ends. It is also badly in need of painting and needs new pilings.

However, owing to the unsettled state of affairs, nothing will be done now that will run up a bit of any size.

Outlook Bright for Peace on the Lines West

United Press Telegram.

PITTSBURGH, July 18.—Negotiations between the employees and officials of the Pennsylvania railroad were resumed this afternoon. Although the company is making preparations for a strike on its lines east the conference here was friendly and is believed to indicate a settlement of the differences with the men on the Lines West.

Vice President, L. E. Sheppard and G. H. Shies of the Order of Railroad Conductors and Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen this morning conferred with the delegates and at noon declared the situation unchanged. The men hope for peace, if possible.

Union station executive officials have been recalled from their vacations. No precautions are taken by the Lines West against a strike except to keep sleeping and dining cars in reserve for a few critical points. The men declare the principal object to be obtained on the Lines West is recognition of their union.

A member of the Trainmen's union said:

"The Lines West, including the Northwest and Southwest systems, will undoubtedly settle their differences this week. I have no doubt the lines east will have a way to agree."

Strike Hinges Upon Outcome of Conference

United Press Telegram.

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—When the trainmen and General Manager Myers entered into conference today it was admitted that upon the result hinges whether the strike will be called. The men sought the conference, claiming the company misinterpreted their attitude. They planned to explain matters and hoped to arrange a compromise.

Nothing in this nothing can prevent a strike. A statement is expected after the conference. It is said that strike preparations are being made on the lines west of Pittsburgh as it is believed there will be a settlement there.

Crippen Case Baffles Police; Lack Evidence

United Press Telegram.

LONDON, July 18.—After hearing the testimony of friends and the police, the coroner's inquest investigating the death of the woman supposed to have been Mrs. Crippen adjourned today for a month.

Dr. Marshall, police surgeon, who assisted in the autopsy, swore that an examination of the flesh failed to furnish tangible evidence that the body was even that of a woman. It was impossible to furnish legal proof that a murder had been committed and it was not possible to tell the cause of death.

Legal authorities say it would be impossible to convict Crippen unless Miss Le Neve is forced to narrate something or Crippen confesses.

ITALIAN KILLS A COUNTRYMAN.

Shaw Mines, Near Meyersdale, Is the Scene of Murder Following a Quarrel on Saturday Evening.

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER.

MEYERSDALE, July 18.—About six o'clock Saturday evening, Joe Jack shot and instantly killed Jake Spinetta at a small mining hamlet known as Shaw Mines, where the Elk Lick mines of the Consolidation Coal Company are located, about two miles south of this place. Immediately following the crime the local authorities were notified by telephone and officers at once started in pursuit of the murderer. Up to the present, however, no trace of the culprit's whereabouts can be learned.

Saturday was pay day at the mines, and it seems that the "speakeasies" and private dwellings were stocked with an unusual amount of booze. Some months ago, it is said, Jack killed Spinetta a sum of money which he sued to pay the expense of bringing his wife and two children from Italy. It seems that Spinetta had since made no effort to repay the loan; they quarreled and Spinetta drew a revolver and made for Jack, who drew a revolver and pumped five loads into the body of Spinetta, killing him instantly. The killing occurred on top of the coke oven near No. 2 mine. Both men are married and have families. The body of Spinetta was last night brought to the undertaking rooms of R. Reich & Son where it was prepared for burial. Officers are still scouring the country for Jack, and it is thought he will be located shortly, the officers being of the opinion that he is hiding in some of the abandoned mine workings in this vicinity.

Effort to Prevent the Issue of Bonds May be Made by Attorney Higbee.

The Borough Solicitors Have been advised that steps may be taken to secure an injunction to block the bond issue voted for at the special election last Tuesday.

According to reports Attorney E. C. Higbee is said to contemplate entering proceedings to prevent the bonds from being issued. At the offices here of Sterling, Higbee & Matthews it was stated that Mr. Higbee was not expected to take such a course.

Attorney Higbee was opposed to both bond issues, although he took no part in opposing them at the polls. The legality of the proceedings he questioned because, in issuing the bonds, he claims that the citizens of the West Side are compelled to share the debt of the old borough of Connelleville contrary to the consolidation agreement.

MONDAY EVENING, JULY 18, 1910.

THE INDEPENDENT REPUBLICAN MOVEMENT.

An aggregation of Republican and Democratic Down-and-Outs have issued a call for an Independent State Convention to be held in Philadelphia, July 28th, "to consider the nomination of a proper ticket and adoption of a suitable platform or declaration of principles."

The call declares that "representative free government has been overthrown in Pennsylvania"; that only "the empty form" remains; that all governmental functions are performed by "the creatures of a political machine"; and that "the manipulators of this machine have dictated the actions of both the Republican and Democratic State Conventions."

The appeal will not appeal very strongly to the average excellent citizen, first, because it contains the names of too many disappointed office-seekers, and second, because no machine was ever constructed by politicians that cannot be smashed to smithereens at a majority of the work is unsatisfactory to a majority of the people or a majority of the party which it represents.

Senator Penrose is accused of being the head of a Republican machine, and Colonel Guffey is accused of being the head of a Democratic machine, and they are both accused of having a private community of political favor; yet neither could maintain his leadership or his leadership, just as it pleases the reader to term it, without the consent of the common people of his party.

They remain in their respective positions, leaders of organizations or bosses of machines, just as you please, so long as they give a good account of their stewardship. They stay if they make good, but they go if they do not. If they see to it that the government or the party they are responsible for is intelligently and honestly administered or directed, the great mass of honest citizens, members of either of the great political parties, are content to permit them to steer the party course through the narrow and tortuous channels of successful administration and wise public policy.

The average American citizen has enough of his own business to attend to without continually worrying his mind about the state of the nation and the steering gear of the party; but he places the responsibility where it belongs, and if his leaders or his bosses, his organization or his machine, fail to provide him with good government he is ready to make a change in a servant; for, after all, they are only servants, and hard-worked servants at that.

The present demand for a change of help snatches too much of the energy of discharged and discredited servants. The cry is against a political machine, not against the government provided for the people by that machine. In spite of the wall of distress from a bunch of broken-down political appetites, we will always have political leaders and political organizations, and our faith in them will continue to be measured by their worth alone.

When it is shown that the government of Pennsylvania is not capable or faithful, it will be time to talk about an independent political movement; provided, always, the party in power does not do it own house-cleaning in a satisfactory manner, as it did under the administration of Governor Stuart.

WHOLESALE AND DELIBERATE MURDER.

The turbulent Klondyke region of Fayette county has been the scene of all manner of violence arising from race prejudice, but if the charge against a colored coke worker of Shamokin is sustained there will have been discovered one of the greatest villains unhung.

Most Klondyke crime is due to hot blood. Its perpetrators are docile and friendly in their sober moments. It is only when their passions are roused by drink and other inciting causes that they attack each other regardless of the results.

But a wilful and premeditated attempt at wholesale murder, such as poisoning a neighbor's spring, has perhaps never before been known to the Klondyke community, and if the charge is shown to be well founded it deserves the severest penalty of the law.

A WARNING TO RECKLESS AUTO DRIVERS.

The burgess and the police force of Connelville have given automobile drivers a solemn warning against reckless driving through the crowded portions of the town, and it is hoped that it will have the effect of materially improving the situation.

The three automobile artists who were pulled in were all discharged, but the fact that they were arrested indicates that in the future the public officials propose to strictly enforce the laws and ordinances against fast and reckless running.

This should be done for the protection of the public and of the motorists themselves.

Greene county people are buying their coal back again.

The Connelville postmen have no cause to complain of hard times. They have gotten a raise without having to ask for it or to demand the derrier resort of arbitration. All of which goes to show that the bigger the corporation the less trouble labor has in dealing with it.

UPPER TYRONE; ITS TEACHERS.

School Board Selects the Corps of Instructors for the Township.

LETS THE SUPPLIES CONTRACT

The School Term Will Open on Monday, August 20—Festivals Were Plenty About Scottsdale—Serenade Money Given to a Minister.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, July 18.—The Upper Tyrone township School Board met in the South Tyrone school house for the purpose of selecting teachers, setting the time for beginning school and the length of the term on Saturday. All the members of the board were present. President W. K. Brooks, Secretary J. B. King, Anthony Haley, D. E. Hixson, L. L. Keller and Albert Hett. After the payment of the regular bills, it was found that there is a balance in the treasury of $213.01. The bids were opened on general supplies for the schools and it was found that I. M. Glass of Dunbar township offered to furnish the supplies for $397.50 and William McLaughlin of Everett offered to furnish them for $157.50. Messrs. King, Keller and Hett are on the Supplies Committee and the board let the contract to McLaughlin. It was decided that the schools shall start on Monday, August 29, and continue for eight months, the same as last year. The teachers were elected as follows:

McClure, Irene Cunniff; Kiferstown, No. 1, Anna Ritchey; No. 2, Margaret Doyle; Everett, No. 1, Katherine King; No. 2, Bertha McLaughlin; Titusman, No. 1, Anna Cossell; No. 2, Clara Kane; Ridgeway, No. 1, Lizzie Newton; No. 2, Letta Dull, Broad Ford, No. 1, Mollie Glerke; No. 2, Marceline Hardy.

Prof. Bert Montgomery was re-elected principal of the Upper Tyrone township High School at Titusman at a salary of $100 per month. Minnie Leichter was elected substitute teacher. The wages paid are $15.00 and $25 per month. President P. O. Peterson of the Potomac Highlands College of Scottsdale was elected special teacher in writing for the township. Upper Tyrone township does not have a township principal, the work of attending to the supplies and such matters being performed by the secretary of the board. The list shows that nearly every teacher was changed as to their location last year. A few new teachers were elected this year.

WOMEN JOIN DETECTIVES IN SEARCH FOR DR. HAWLEY H. CRIPPEN.

Illustration by American Press Association

NEW YORK, July 18.—Dr. Hawley Crippen, who is wanted by the London police on the charge of having murdered his wife, known on the stage as Belle Elmore, has not been found among the passengers or others who have arrived in New York on the various steamships. Detectives from police headquarters who met the ships for the purpose of intercepting and arresting the American doctor if he is on board scrutinize every passenger, cabin as well as steerage, and even the sailors, stewards and other members of the crews. Lieutenants Leeson and Wood have charge of the search and are assisted by Lieutenants Scanton

Dr. Surface's Views on Rattlers In Pennsylvania That Climb Trees.

HARRISBURG, July 18.—The one thing that is puzzling the snake experts about the Capitol is why no evidence reaches State Economic Zoologist H. A. Surface of the ability of a rattlesnake to climb a tree. Professor Surface said today that he has no more knowledge of this belief than the average citizen. He said that he had a month ago, or even a year ago, notwithstanding the amount of evidence that has been searched out by the North American clinching the rattler's side of the case.

"The challenge still stands," said Professor Surface. "The State of Pennsylvania doesn't know that a rattlesnake can climb a tree, neither do we absolutely know that he can't, but we incline to the latter belief. We'd like some definite, first hand knowledge of the ability of the rattler to climb up a monarch of the forest or a sapling," exclaims the state's expert on bugs.

So far, the only information which has reached here since Paul Lemuel mudo Columbia county famous by being treed between two trees has been gleaned from the newspapers.

"This matter has passed beyond the purely local stage," Surface said recently. "Seriously, it is becoming a scientific question. I see by the North American that both 'Toga' and 'Lycoming' counties claim to have men who have witnessed rattlers climb trees, or who, at least, have seen them do so."

B. Fretts on the evening of their marriage recently was given over by the one it was intended to be at that time, W. D. Fretts, to Rev. Archibald Auld, pastor of the Jacobs Creek Church, with which many of those who were present were affiliated with. Rev. Auld is recovering his health slowly and the trip he took recently seems to have been beneficial. Rev. R. B. Mansell, D. D., preached at Jacobs Creek yesterday.

CRIPPEN KEEPS OUT OF SIGHT.

No Trace of Missing Doctor or Companion Yet Found.

IS HE DISGUISED AS WOMAN?

Persons Who Know the Doctor Accused of Slaughtering Wife Think He Is Masquerading as Female—Father of Miss Leneve Sends Out Appeal.

London, July 18.—The search for Dr. Crippen, the American who is being hunted for as the murderer of his wife, and Miss Leneve, who, it is said, accompanied him on his flight, is still without result, and for the moment the police have no information that is likely to afford a clue to the couple's hiding place.

Miss Leneve's father, Walter Newvo (the reason for the daughter calling herself Leneve has received no other explanation than feminine affectation), has given the press an open letter appealing to his daughter to return or to surrender herself to the police. He writes:

"Dear Ethel: Should this letter by any chance come before your notice I fervently appeal to you with all a father's and mother's love to return to London or to give yourself up to the police authorities of whatever country you may be in. Every hour you stay you make the situation worse for yourself. Do write me instantly. I assure you of my devotion and protection through this trouble. Your affectionate father (signed) Dad."

Newvo says it is practically certain that his daughter is in France. She and Crippen, after they were married, spent quite a little time at Dieppe, Calais and other French resorts, generally staying at small, quiet hotels out of the usual track of tourists.

Masquerading as Woman?
Newvo makes a suggestion, which has been made independently by other acquaintances, that Crippen is masquerading as a woman. His gut, effeminate mannerisms and manner all combine, says Newvo, to make such a makeshift easy for him.

Adeline Harrison, a writer of dramatic lyrics, records how Mrs. Crippen made him up as a woman on one occasion, pasting down his mustache. The illusion was perfect. She says that with the mustache gone and with Crippen's slight figure impersonation of a woman would be very easy.

The manner in which the police apparently let Crippen escape their clutches to be the subject of criticism. It is admitted that some explanation judicially satisfactory may be forthcoming at the inquest or later, but the critics at present cannot imagine why, after having the man under their hands for nine days, they allow him to vanish, and then give him three days at large.

The Daily Mail editorially condemns them for taking a half-hearted course, which will certainly not enhance the reputation of Scotland Yard. There also seems to have been delay in warning the police authorities in some parts of Europe.

BRICK ROADS.

Planned by the Supervisors of Mt. Pleasant Township.

HICKORY, July 15.—At a recent meeting of the road supervisors of Mt. Pleasant township held in the bank building, it was decided to build 3,500 feet of brick road in the township this summer, each supervisor to have the supervision of 1,250 feet and to build it where he thinks best.

The supervisors are Joseph Carlisle, David Miller and Samuel Farrar. Mr. Carlisle will build his section in Hickory, beginning at the residence of Dr. McConnell and extending west 1,250 feet. Mr. Farrar will put down his section on the Mill road, while Mr. Miller will lay his section to the section completed last year running from the Sprout road near the residence of George Kinnison on the Valley road to Hartsgetstown.

The Hudson Construction company of Washington has completed the concrete bridge over Millers run near Georges station and several men are at work with crews filling up the approach to the bridge.

OLIPHANT.

OLIPHANT, July 18.—Lindsay Wilson, clerk in the Union Supply Company store, has been transferred to the Wynn store as butcher for the same company.

Mrs. Beulah Smith of Lovellville, Ohio, is visiting relatives and friends here.

John W. Wilson is nursing a very sore hand. He is helped by a cut. Channing McIntyre, formerly police at Fairbairn, has resigned and expects a position with the Frick company at this place.

There was a festival held here on Friday and Saturday night for the benefit of the St. Paul Church. Miss Anna DeGroot of Continental No. 3 has returned home after spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hart.

The store will be closed all day Wednesday to give the clerks and managers a chance to attend the picnic at Shady Grove park.

A young man named Mahoney of Uniontown has accepted a position as clerk in the Union Supply Company store.

The Glass City Union Deposit Bank of Jeannette this week declared a semi-annual dividend of three per cent.

GOVERNMENT MAY OBJECT.

To Charges Proposed by Railroad Along Monongahela River.

CHARLESTON, July 18.—It is said that the United States Government may take a hand in a Brownsville controversy to keep the Monongahela railroad company from blocking land communication with the river. The look, which has been recently finished there.

The Brownsville council recently passed an ordinance over the veto of Burgess S. Mince, giving the railroad company possession of two streets that lead to the river. It is stated that the government may begin injunction proceedings to prevent the company from carrying out their intention of laying branch tracks in this vicinity.

GET TOGETHER TO CRUSH BRYAN.

Nebraska Democrats Hope to Achieve His Downfall.

PEERLESS LEADER IS BUMPED

Such a Poor Showing is Made by Col. Bryan With His County Option Scheme That Nebraska Politicians Think It Good Time to Drop Him.

Omaha, Neb., July 18.—"Will William Jennings Bryan be found supporting the Republican state ticket this fall?" is a question going the rounds of political circles.

The general answer, that to be consistent, Mr. Bryan will be forced to that extreme is returned.

Bryan has declared that the whiffy interests are about to gain control of the Democratic party in Nebraska, and that he, with his county option plan, is fighting that element. He has declared repeatedly that that interest is the great menace to the country and that every citizen should vote against it.

The results of county conventions show without doubt that the Democratic will not place county option in its platform and will repudiate Bryan. Republican conventions show that the Republican state convention will declare for county option.

William J. Bryan is to be completely crushed by the Nebraska Democracy now that he is "down and out." That is the word which has gone out from the leaders to all counties of this state where conventions have not already been held.

Not a single Bryan man is to be placed on delegations regardless of the instructions given the delegates by the county conventions.

Bryan Made a Poor Showing.

The poor showing made by Bryan and his county option scheme was so surprising to the insurgents that they have determined to once for all rid themselves of the peerless leader. The anti-county optionists expected victory, but not so overwhelmingly, and the weakness displayed by Bryan has made the opposition leaders bold in and "throw Bryan over the board."

To date Bryan has captured the delegation from only a single county. Special efforts will be made in the counties yet to hold conventions to prevent the naming of a single Bryan sympathizer in the convention itself, upon a single committee, that the time of the great speech which he is expected to make be cut to the minimum and that while no actual die-courtesy be shown him, yet that he receive scant attention from the convention.

STORM HITS WILMINGTON

One Man Killed and Others Shooked in Delaware City.

Wilmington, Del., July 18.—The most severe electrical storm of the season occurred here, as a result one man is dead, another was fearfully shocked by lightning and considerable damage was done.

Edward Keyser, aged seventy-two, hurried to his home in order to be with his aged wife, who is afraid of storms. Just as he entered his house he was struck by lightning and he was killed. The excitement caused heart disease. A telegraph operator was struck by lightning while working on an instrument. He arose and taking a few steps, fell unconscious. He may recover.

Lightning struck the electric plant of the New Wilmington and Philadelphia Traction company and put it out of business. The same plant was destroyed by lightning a month ago. Some other places were struck.

FARMER'S LIFE IS SOUGHT

Sheriff Has Strong Guard Thrown Around Jail to Prevent Lynching.

East, Pa., July 18.—The sheriff of this county is maintaining a strong guard at the county jail to prevent the threatened lynching of Moses Richter, an Amish farmer, who confessed to the murder of an orphan boy named Charles Cox, the lad being twelve years old.

An examination of the boy's body showed many bruises and cuts and Richter admits kicking him and even telling him, saying that the boy made him so mad that he could not control himself.

Life Tamer Escapes. Warren, O., July 18.—Phillip Gaudin of Niles, confessed murderer of Edwin G. Wilson of this city, escaped from the county jail here. He sawed the lock off the hospital department and escaped through an opening in the bars. Bloodhounds were put on his trail.

Blockade Recognized.

Norway Takes Action on Situation in Nicaragua.

New Orleans, July 18.—The Nicaraguan, or rather the Bluefields, situation has been rendered more complicated by the order of the government of Norway, just communicated to the Norwegian consuls here and through out the United States, recognizing the Matriz blockade of Bluefields and warning all vessels that the government has withdrawn its protection from vessels entering Bluefields and they will do so at their own risk.

By this decree the Matriz converted warship, the Venus, may seize any Norwegian vessel, trying to enter into Bluefields in defiance of the Matriz blockade of Bluefields, and Norway will make no objection to it. This action is rendered all the more serious by the fact that all the vessels running from New Orleans and Mobile to Bluefields fly the Norwegian flag.

The question is an important one, as Bluefields and the Estrada coast of Nicaragua being cut off from the interior by the Matriz armies, are entirely dependent on this country for food, and the many Americans there as well as the revolutionary army will soon be starving if cut off from New Orleans, its base of supplies.

Therefore, two American sailors have been taken on every vessel going to Bluefields, their presence preventing the Matriz forces on the coast from firing on the vessel unless willing to run the risk of breaking with Uncle Sam.

The action of Norway is probably due to the danger it sees of becoming involved in the Central American trouble. Several of the Norwegian captains, however, have announced their willingness to run the blockade to Bluefields. The report is in circulation here that the action of Norway is due to the suggestion of Germany, which has already recognized the Matriz government.

LYNCHING JUST AVERTED

Repetition of Newark Tragedy Nearly Occurs at East Liverpool.

East Liverpool, O., July 18.—A repetition of the Newark (O.) lynching nearly occurred here when Ira Rickett, a dry detective, fired upon a gang of wet sympathizers who attacked him and shot Albert Kettle, a bystander, in the neck.

As in Newark, a crowd pursued Rickett, but a policeman saved him from injury. The crowd followed them to the jail and threats of lynching were freely made when it was reported that Rickett had killed a saloon sympathizer.

In their sermons ministers said the affair was the result of lax enforcement of the laws. They declared that summary action will be necessary to prevent a repetition at some future time of the Newark tragedy.

ZANESVILLE MAN ARRESTED

Murder Charge Against Wurster For Alleged Complicity in Lynching.

Zanesville, O., July 18.—William F. Wurster, Jr., aged twenty-one, was arrested here charged with complicity in the Newark lynching on July 8, when Capt. Diering, a dry detective, was lynched. Wurster is charged with murder. The affidavit specifies he acted as lookout and placed the rope around his neck.

Wurster admits he saw the fall down, torn down and strangled man, but denied taking any part in the lynching and says he did not recognize the placards. Wurster is a potter worker, and has borne a good reputation. His father has been in the saloon business here for years. Wurster will be taken to Newark when the special grand jury is to investigate the riot convicts. Other arrests are expected.

The Girl and the Bill

By Bannister Merwin

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

CHAPTER IV.

"Oh, the Girl of the Car," she said, with a little gasp of recognition, "are you Mr. Orme?" Her cheeks flushed softly.

He bowed; his heart was beating furiously, and for the moment he dared not try to speak.

"Then we do meet again," she exclaimed, "and as usual I need your help. Isn't it queer?"

"Any service that I—?" Orme began hesitatingly. "Of course, anything that I can do—"

The girl laughed, a merry ripple of sound; then caught herself and changed her manner to grave earnestness. "It is very important," she said, "I am looking for a five-dollar bill that was paid to you today."

Orme started. "What? You, too?"

"I, too? Has anybody else?"

"Her gravity was more intense."

"Why, yes," said Orme, "a little man from South America."

"Oh—Mr. Portol?" Her brows were knit in an adorable frown.

"Yes—and two Japanese."

"Oh!" Her exclamation was appreciative.

"The Japanese got it," added Orme, ruefully. "That she had the information it never occurred to him to question."

"The girl stood rigidly. 'Whatever shall I do now?' she whispered. 'My poor father!'"

She looked helplessly at Orme. His self-possession had returned, and as he urged her to a chair, he condemned himself for not guessing how serious the loss of the bill must be to her. "Sit down," he said. "Perhaps I can help. But you see, I know so little of this sort of thing. Tell me everything you can."

With a sigh, she sank into the chair. Orme stood before her, waiting.

"That bill tells, if I am not mistaken," she said, wearily, "where certain papers have been hidden. My father is ill at our place in the country. He must have those papers before midnight tomorrow, or—"

Tears came into her eyes. Orme would have given much for the right to comfort her. "So much depends upon finding them," she added, "more even than I can begin to tell you."

"Let me help," said Orme, eager to follow those papers in the country. "If only it would serve her. 'Hear my story first.' Rapidly he recounted the adventures of the evening. She listened, eyes intent, nodding in recognition of his description of Portol and Alcitrante. When he came to the account of the fight in the porters' office and spoke of the Japanese with the scar on his forehead, she interrupted.

"Oh! That was Maku," she exclaimed.

"Maku?"

"Our butler. He must have overheard my father and me."

"Then he knew the value of the papers?"

"He must have. I am sorry, Mr. Orme, that you have been so roughly used."

"That doesn't matter," he said. "They didn't hurt me. The hotel. And now, what is your story? How did you get on the trail of the bill?"

"We came back from the east a few days ago," she began. "My father had to undergo a slight operation, and he wished to have it performed by his friend, Dr. Allison, who lives here, so we went to our home in one of the northern suburbs."

"Father could not go back east as soon as he had expected to, and he had the papers sent to him, by special arrangement with the—with the other parties to the contract. Mr. Portol followed us from the east. I—"

She had known him there. He was always amusing company; he never took him seriously. He had business here, he said; but on the first day of his arrival he came out to call on us. The next night our house was entered by a burglar. Besides the papers, only a few things were taken."

"Portol?" exclaimed Orme, incredulously.

"It happened that a Chicago detective had been in our village on business during the day," she went on. "He had recognized on the streets a well-known thief, named Walsh. When he reported the burglary the detective remembered seeing Walsh, and hunted him out and arrested him. In his pockets was some jewelry belonging to me, and in his room the other stolen articles were found—everything except the papers."

"Did you tell the police about the papers?"

"No, it seemed wiser not to. They were in a sealed envelope with—my father's name on it, and would surely have been returned, if found with the other things. There are reasons why they would have—would try to leave my father. We did not let them know that an envelope containing something of value had not been recovered, and told them to make a thorough search."

ILLUSTRATION BY RAY WALTERS

The afternoon after the burglary the news of Walsh's arrest was telephoned out to us from Chicago. I talked with my father, who was not well enough to leave the house, and it seemed best that some one should go to the country jail and see Walsh and try to get the papers. My father had reasons for not wishing the loss to become known. Only he and I were acquainted with the contents of the envelope; so I insisted on going to Chicago and interviewing the burglar."

She laughed, interpreting Orme's admiring look. "Oh, it was easy enough. I planned to take our lawyer as an escort."

"Did you?"

"No, and that is where my troubles really began. Just as I was preparing to go, Mr. Portol called. I had forgotten that we had asked him out for an afternoon of golf. He is such a funny player."

"As soon as I told him I was going to the Chicago jail to interview a burglar about some stolen goods, he insisted on acting as escort. He was so amusingly persistent that I finally agreed. We set out for the city in my car, not waiting to take a train."

"When we reached the jail I presented a letter which my father had written, and the officials agreed to let me have a private interview with Walsh."

Orme opened his eyes. The girl's father must have considerable influence.

"It is a horrid place, the jail. They took us through a corridor to Walsh's cell, and called him to the grating. I made Mr. Portol stand back at the other side of the corridor so that he couldn't hear us talk."

"I asked the man what he had done with the papers. He insisted that he had seen none. Then I promised to have him freed, if he would only return them. He looked meditatively over my shoulders and after a moment declined the offer, again insisting that he didn't understand what I was talking about. 'I took the other things, miss,' he said, 'and I suppose I'll get time for it. But so help me, I didn't see no papers.'"

The girl paused and looked at Orme. This seems like wasting minutes when we might be searching."

Orme was pleased to hear the "we."

"Well," she went on, "I knew that the man was not telling the truth. He was too hesitant to be convincing. So I began to promise him money. At every offer he looked past my shoulder and then repeated his denials. The last time he insisted that he had an intuition that something was going on behind me. I turned quickly. There stood Mr. Portol, extending his fingers in the air and forming his mouth silently into words. He was raising his bids."

"It flashed upon me that the papers would be of immense value to Mr. Portol—for certain reasons. It only raised my bids."

trouble. It had been smuggled in to him in some way. 'You might get me some money,' he said, thrusting the bill through the bars and grinning. 'Now I understand what was going on. I reached for the bill, as though it were intended for me, but Mr. Portol was quicker. He snatched the bill and put it in his pocket.'

"I didn't know what to do. But suddenly Mr. Portol seemed to be frightened. Perhaps he thought that I would have him arrested, though he might have known that there were reasons why I couldn't. He gave me a panicky look and rushed out of the corridor. Afterward I learned that he told the guard I had sent him on an errand."

"Well," she sighed, "of course, I followed, after a last glance at Walsh, who was peering through the grating with a look of evil amusement. He must have been well paid, that burglar. But then," she mused, "they could find it—yes, they could well afford it."

"When I got to the street, Portol was just disappearing in my car. I can only think that he had lost his head very completely, for he didn't need to take the car. He could have walked with the street crowd and gone about the hotel where—"

"Alcitrante?"

"Yes, Mr. Alcitrante—where he was stopping, and had waited there. But Mr. Alcitrante was playing golf at Wheaton, and Mr. Portol seems to have thought that he must go straight to him. He cannot escape from being spectacular, you see."

"He ran out through the western suburbs, putting on more and more speed. Moments later I saw a detective on the track of the car. That is how I learned what I am now telling you. As for the car, Mr. Portol sent it back to me this morning with a hired chauffeur. He wrote a note of apologetic apology, saying that he had been beside himself and had not realized what he was doing."

"After setting the detective at work, I went out to our place by train. I dreamt of confessing my failure to father, but he took it very well. We had dinner together in his study. Maku was in the room while we were talking. Now I can see why Maku disappeared after dinner and did not return."

"But how did Portol lose the bill?" asked Orme.

The girl laughed. "It was really ridiculous. He over-slept and was caught by one of those roadside motor car traps, 10 or 12 miles out in the country. They timed him, and stopped him by a bar across the road. From what the detective says, I judge he was frightened almost to speechlessness. He may have thought that he was being arrested for stealing the car. When they dragged him before the country justice, who was sitting under a tree near by, he was white and trembling."

"They fined him $10. He had in his pocket only $11.63, and the marked bill was nearly half the sum. He begged them to let him go—offered them his watch, his ring, his scarf-pin—but the justice insisted on cash. Then he told them that the bill had a formula on it that was valuable to him and no one else."

"The justice was obstinate, and Mr. Portol finally hit on the device which you have seen. It fitted in well with his sense of the theatrical; and the detective says that there was not a scrap of paper at hand. The point was that Mr. Portol was more afraid of delay than anything else. He knew that he would put some one on his track."

"When did all this happen?" asked Orme.

"Yesterday afternoon. Mr. Portol came back to Chicago by trolley and got some money. He went back to the country justice and discovered that the marked bill had been paid out. He has followed it through several persons to you, just as Maku did, and as I have done. But I heard nothing of the Japanese."

"You shouldn't have attempted this alone," said Orme, solicitously.

She smiled faintly. "I dared not let anyone into the secret. I was afraid that a detective might learn too much." She sighed wearily. "I have been on the trail since morning."

"And how did you finally get my address?"

"The man who paid the bill in at the hat shop lives in Hyde Park. I did not get to him until this evening, while he was at dinner. He directed me to the hat shop, which, of course, was closed. I found the address of the owner of the shop in the directory and went to his house. He remembered the bill, and showed me the dresses of his two clerks. The second clerk I saw proved to be the one who had paid the bill to you. Luckily he remembered your address."

Orme stirred himself. "Then the Japanese have the directions for finding the papers?"

"My prudentest," said the girl, "is complicated by the question whether the bill does actually carry definite directions."

"It carries something—a set of abbreviations," said Orme. "But I could not make them out. Let us hope that the Japanese can't. The best course for me to take is to go at once to see Walsh, the burglar."

He assumed that she would accept his aid.

"That is good of you," she said. "But it seems a little hopeless, doesn't it?"

"Why? What else can we do? I suppose you saw to it that, one else should have access to Walsh."

"Yes, father arranged that by telephone. The man is in solitary confinement. Several persons tried to see him today, on the plea of being relatives. None of them was admitted."

"What money king was this girl's father, that he could thus regulate the treatment of prisoners?"

"There were no abbreviations on the bill," she asked.

"Yes. They weren't very elaborate, and I puzzled over them for some time. The curious fact is that, for all my study of them, I can't remember much of anything about them. What I have seen been through, apparently, has driven the letters out of my head."

"Oh, do try to remember," she implored. "Even if you recall only one or two bits of it, they may help me."

"There was something about a man named Evans," he began. "S. R. Evans, it was."

"Evans? That is strange. I can't think how any one of that name could be involved."

"Then S. R. Evans is not your father?" he ventured.

"Oh, no." She laughed a little little laugh. "My father is—"

"But you are sure that the name was Evans?"

"Quite sure. Then there was the abbreviation 'Chl.'—which I took to mean 'Chicago'."

"Yes?" she breathed.

"And there were numerals—a number, then the letter 'N.' another number, followed by the letter 'E.' So far north, so far east, I read it—though I couldn't make out whether the numbers stood for feet or paces or miles."

"Yes, yes," she whispered. Her eyes were intent on him. They seemed to wish him to remember. "What else was there?"

"Old letters, which meant nothing to me. It's annoying, but I simply can't recall them. Believe me, I should like to."

"Perhaps you will a little later," she said. "I'm sorry to be such a bother to you."

"Bother!"

"But it does mean so much, the tracing of this bill."

"Shall we go to see Walsh?" he asked.

"I suppose so," she sighed. Apparently she was discouraged. "But even if he gives the information, it may be too late. The Japanese have the directions."

"But perhaps they will not be able to make them out," he suggested.

She smiled. "You don't know the Japanese. They are absolutely clever at such things. I will venture that they are already on their way to the hiding-place."

"But even if the papers are in the pocket of one of them, it may be possible to steal them back."

"Hardly," she said. "I fear that the one chance in a million possibility that Maku couldn't read the directions. Then, if Walsh will speak out—"

"Now, let me say something," he said. "My name is Robert Orme. Apparently we have common friends in the Wallinghams. When I first saw you this afternoon, I felt that I might have a right to your acquaintance—a social right, if you like; a sympathetic right, I trust."

He held out his hand. She took it frankly, and the friendly pressure of her fingers, palm-pressing the blood through his veins, made him feel that he was not alone.

"I am sorry," she said, "that I can't give you my name. It would be unfair just now—unfair to others; for if you know who I am, it might give you a clue to the secret I guard."

"Some day, I hope, I may know," he said gravely. "But your present name is all I need. Good of you to let me try to help you."

At the same instant they became conscious that their hands were still clasped. The girl blushed, and gently drew hers away.

"I shall call you 'Girl,' Orme added. "A name I like," she said. "My father uses it. Oh, if I only knew what that burglar wrote on the bill!"

Orme started. What a fool he had been! Here he was, trying to help the girl, forcing her to the long, tired recital of her story, when all the time he held her secret in the table in his study. For there was still the paper on which he had copied the abbreviated directions.

"Wait here," he said sharply, and without answering the look of surprise on her face, hurried from the room and to the elevator. A few moments later he was back, the sheet of paper in his hand.

"I can't forgive my own stupidity," he said. "While I was puzzling over the bill this evening I copied the secret on a sheet of paper. When Portol came I put it away in a drawer and forgot all about it. But here it is!"

He laid the paper on the little, useless onyx table that stood beside her chair.

She watched it quickly and began to examine it closely.

"Perhaps you can imagine how those letters puzzled me," he volunteered.

"Fuzz!" she exclaimed; and then: "Oh, this is plain. You wouldn't know, of course, but I see it clearly. There is—"

"How in love?"

WHY THEY FAIL

Most People Remedies Miss the Cause

Diagnoseable treatment with ointments or suppositories usually fails to cure piles and cutting them off won't remove the cause. Such treatment only moderates the outside effects of the disease and fails to remedy the inside cause. The up-to-date doctors now use internal medicine, to treat the circulation in the lower bowel, and so remove the disease.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hum-Roid, the first and only guaranteed internal pile cure—the form of tablets—comes in a box of pills. Sold by A. A. Clarke, Connelville, Pa. $1 for large box. Dr. Leonhardt Co., Station B, Buffalo, N. Y.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

THE high cost of living, or the "cost of high living," as James J. Hill puts it, is a subject which just now is engendering the attention of the entire nation. The cost of the necessities of life has been steadily increasing since 1896. The symptoms have been viewed with increasing alarm by nearly all classes. Within the last year the matter has reached an acute stage. The average increase in the cost of necessities from Jan. 1, 1909, to Jan. 1, 1910, was 11.7 per cent. The increase over July 1, 1909, was 61 per cent.

The wage and salary earners in the cities have seen the "bread line" gradually drawing closer. The margin between income and expenses, narrow at best, has shrunk to the vanishing point. All this while newspapers have been shouting prosperity, forgetful of the old maxim that "the real prosperity of a nation is the citizen's margin of saving."

Whatever the cause of this increase in the cost of necessities and comforts, there are but two ways in which the citizen as an individual can meet it. The first is to increase his income.

The second is to lower his standard of living. The wage earner, bandied together with his fellows in a union, has been able to increase his scale of wages to some extent, though not nearly enough to fill the gap between income and expenses. The wage earner who does not belong to a union has been able to some extent by the general rise in wages, though not so much as the union man.

The salaried man has borne the hardest brunt of the rising prices. He belongs to no union, and his demands for increased pay have brought little response.

All classes that are compelled to work for a living have had to turn to the other alternative in a greater or less degree. They have been forced to lower their standard of living. The first item to be attacked in the food supply, Russell Sage once said, "As the cost of living increases the use of meat decreases, the proportion of dark rooms increases and child labor becomes plentiful." Less meat means poorer nourishment, less resistance to disease and a higher death rate. Other foods of cheaper quality are used. Oleomargarine takes the place of butter. Cold storage eggs are a luxury and fresh eggs unknown, and cheaper brands of canned goods are used.

Aside from food, the big item of expense in the city is rent. In order to keep up with the increased cost of things property owners have been forced to raise rents. The frenzied crowding of the people to the cities has enabled landlords to make these increases so effective. The result is that a house with a porch and a bit of lawn has become a luxury, and more and more the middle classes, the classes on whom prosperity should react most favorably, have been forced into flats and apartment houses. The poorer classes have moved into tenements. The high cost of room has made crowding inevitable. Human beings have been forced to herd together like cattle or worse. The modern dairy barn is a palace beside some of the tenements that pass muster as human habitations.

Many causes have been advanced by economists and others to account for the rise in prices. Many blame the tariff, but that will not explain why prices are rising nearly as rapidly in England as in the United States. The economist's favorite reason is the increase in the supply of gold. Money is becoming cheaper, he says, and therefore it takes more of it to buy a given amount of any commodity. This explanation sounds very plausible, but it does not explain the fact that prices have at other times gone down in the face of increased gold production. The gold supply is unquestionably a factor influencing rising prices. That it is the fundamental factor may well be doubted.

Other writers try to lay the whole trouble to the growing extravagance of the American people and to the increased standard of living. It is true that at the present time we regard as necessities what yesterday were luxuries. This increase in the "standard of living" is the product of civilization, however, and is something to be encouraged rather than discouraged. Furthermore, it is responsible in but

A small degree for the increase in the cost of living. The increase in the standard of living has manifested itself most strongly in better houses, better clothing and more conveniences. Yet the great increase in cost has been not in these materials, but in food. Between July 1, 1896, and Jan. 1, 1910, breadstuffs and live stock increased in price 108 per cent. During the same period the increase in the textiles was 73 per cent, in metals 63 per cent and in building materials only 15 per cent. That luxurious living has had much to do with the increased prices cannot be denied. That it is wholly responsible is far from the truth.

If we are to seek the real cause of this crisis that confronts our country we must go back to the old cause of supply and demand, coupled with other factors that have grown out of this. The period from 1870 to 1895 was the period of development of the middle west, the bread basket of the world. Here were lands of unparalleled fertility that had merely to be scratched to give forth their bountiful supplies. The result was that the markets of the world were flooded with foodstuffs.

By 1896 the middle west was pretty well settled. The bloom of its virgin fertility had been removed. Soon the days of using corn for fuel and wheat to feed the hogs were past. Prices of farm products began to rise. If there had been no other factor entering in they would soon have reached a normal level, and the readjustment would have come with little trouble. Unfortunately the tide of population toward the cities had become too strong to be turned in a day.

From 1880 to 1900 the percentage of farmers decreased from 44 to 35.6, a decrease of 8.7 per cent. During the same period the percentage of persons engaged in manufacturing increased from 22.8 to 21.3. This increase of 2.5 per cent is no more than normal and may be accounted for by the increase in the standard of living and the consequent demand for manufactured articles. The increase in professional lines during this time was eight-tenths of 1 per cent, while the number of persons engaged in domestic and personal service decreased one-tenth of 1 per cent.

The great increase came in the number of persons engaged in trade and transportation, an increase of 5.5 per cent. Of the 10.3 per cent of the working people engaged in trade and transportation in 1900 only nine-tenths were engaged in transportation proper. The others, 15.4 per cent of all the people of the United States who work, were simply middlemen. Complete figures since 1900 are not available, but the cityward trend has increased rather than diminished.

Here is the true explanation of the high cost of living. There are more than one-third as many men engaged in distributing food as there are in producing it. The consumer's dollar is worth this before it gets to the producer. The 10,000,000 men who farm must supply food to the 7,000,000 people who are working in the factories, and the second is to lower his standard of living. The wage earner, bandied together with his fellows in a union, has been able to increase his scale of wages to some extent, though not nearly enough to fill the gap between income and expenses. The wage earner who does not belong to a union has been able to some extent by the general rise in wages, though not so much as the union man.

The salaried man has borne the hardest brunt of the rising prices. He belongs to no union, and his demands for increased pay have brought little response.

This explanation sounds very plausible, but it does not explain the fact that prices have at other times gone down in the face of increased gold production. The gold supply is unquestionably a factor influencing rising prices. That it is the fundamental factor may well be doubted.

Other writers try to lay the whole trouble to the growing extravagance of the American people and to the increased standard of living. It is true that at the present time we regard as necessities what yesterday were luxuries. This increase in the "standard of living" is the product of civilization, however, and is something to be encouraged rather than discouraged. Furthermore, it is responsible in but to the 12,000,000 people who are doing unproductive work and to the 45,000,000 people who do not work at all. And because the changed ratio of supply and demand are enabling the farmer to make a profit where before he worked at a loss there is a great outcry over the high cost of living. This outcry will not change things in the least. Neither will boycotts nor anti-union schemes.

There is only one remedy, a reversal of the tide of population. The abnormal growth of cities must be checked. Farming must be restored to its proper place in the industrial world. In the succeeding articles we shall note some of the forces that are bringing this about.
